SKILLS

1. Event planning: Experienced with events from planning to execution. Where I may lack in creativity, I make up for it with logical reasoning in logistical planning
2. Communicator: Able to persuade individuals in both casual and professional settings. There's always a win-win situation somewhere – you just have to find it.
3. Team Player: Accustomed to many team structures and leadership styles which allow me to adapt and work seamlessly with any team.
4. Team Leader: Understanding one's team plays a huge role in team dynamics. I am always quick to identify and play to the strengths of my team.

Second Choice: Socials Officer

Proposer: Wen Yeh Lee (Clare College)

Second: Shaun Ho (Homerton College)

As a first-year engineer, it was very easy for me to get caught up in the whirlwind of 8-week terms. With that, I found Cambridge increasingly like a pressurized bubble. Through CUMaS, I want to remind freshers and members alike that there's always a family behind them to have fun and to support them throughout their Cambridge life.

GOALS

Mentorship

As a fresher, university was truly a daunting task. Settling in, coping with academics, applying for internships, and cramming that all into 8 weeks left me stumbling in the dark for some time. By tapping into the wealth of experience of the older years, I feel that the integration of freshers into university life can be smoothed out. I think that there is a necessity for a formal system where expectations can be set out and benefits can be maximised whilst being agreeable for both parties.

Access Programs

This society is present in established schools across Malaysia, but it has been heavily reliant on the word of mouth. Going forward, I feel the need to work with our sponsors and perhaps other MSocs like OUMC to expand our reach to smaller, lesser known schools. After all, it may not be a matter of talent but rather a matter of people being afraid to apply

CUMaS Family Swaps

FAMILY is something I feel very strongly about and something I believe resonates amongst the society – it's what sets us apart from others. Aligned with those beliefs, in the coming year I look to not just encourage family exclusive gatherings but small-scale socials between families as well. Meeting new members, spilling the tea on the society's latest family homewreckers, or just arranging marriages for your children – it'll be a great way to get to know more people in the society.

Term Cards

Planning ahead for each term is something that is essential when weekends come and go faster than we realise. I believe that it is a major player in participation rates from the 3rd or 4th year students. By being aware of the timeline of events scattered across term, I hope to be able to make CUMaS a more inclusive society for members of all years.
